I saw Adam Jacobs, the Aragon math co-chair, at Starbucks recently, and he told me that the SMUHSD has decided to end the trial of the CPM precalculus textbook. Serious problems with this book led to my meeting with the administration and staff at Aragon as well as my series of education articles on NextDoor in January and February.

The district will adopt a new book from Pearson publishing. I have not seen the new book yet, but Pearson tends to publish more traditional textbooks, and Mr. Jacobs thought I would like it.

This last year has been a tough one for many students involved in the CPM precalculus trial, and I am happy to learn that it is ending with this year. I'd like to thank the district for making the right decision.

Sincerely,

David Kristofferson
